

Pure Food Exposition Opens At the Arcade; Housekeepers View Exhibits and Hear Talks

Pure food week is on!

By noon today the Arcade Auditorium was in readiness for the opening of the Westfield Pure Food Exposition at 2 o'clock this afternoon.

The great hall was brilliantly lighted and tastefully decorated. Each of the twenty-five booths, lining each side of the hall, was adorned and designed in a way to bring out the particular product which it represented.

At the opening hour P. T. Moran, president of the Chamber of Commerce, was to deliver a brief opening address and introduce Mrs. Ellis Logan, Mrs. Alice Whitaker, and Mrs. Mary Harris Hoar. Mrs. Logan was to welcome club women of the District, among whom 1,000 invitations have been distributed by Mrs. Logan, president of the District Federation of Women's Clubs.

Welcomes Alliance Members.

Mrs. Whitaker welcomed the members of the Housekeepers' Alliance, who are showing the deepest interest in the plan for the exhibit. Mrs. Hoar is a lecturer of national note on food preparation, cooking, and nutritive values. She was to give her opening lecture this afternoon.

One of the most attractive booths was that of the Washington Gas Light Company. This booth displayed the most modern and up-to-date methods of using gas in cooking, as well as in household lighting. The booth was a center of interest among the early crowds at the show.

One of the most picturesque booths was the Ceylon tea house, placed in the auditorium by Martin Gillett, of Baltimore. This booth, displaying a line of teas, was designed in true Chinese fashion, and was decorated with Chinese posters.

Many Washington exhibitors are taking part in the exposition. Among these are the Lady Fairfax Company, which shows candies that measure up to the Westfield pure food standard; the Velvet Kind ice cream makers; and Meyer & Company, who are showing a line of the most modern and efficient kitchen appliances.

The booths are on each side of the hall, and the center is left clear as a lecture hall, where Mrs. Hoar was to deliver her first lecture on cooking. Her lectures will be a feature at the exposition throughout the week.

Expressing great interest in the exposition is Miss Emma Jacobs, head of the domestic science department of the public schools, who will attend the exposition later in the week.

Sherman To Speak.

This evening John Sherman, superintendent of weights, measures, and markets, will open the meeting with an address on efficiency in the household. Mr. Sherman, besides having made a close study of marketing problems, also has studied household efficiency and has delivered many talks in Washington on problems of this sort.

Arcade auditorium this afternoon presents a housewife's fairland. The hall had been decorated for the opening of the exposition. On each side were leaders in a crusade among club women this season for more intelligent kitchen management.

The exhibit will open daily at 2 o'clock, and the hall will be open throughout the afternoon and evening until 10 o'clock. Mrs. Hoar's lectures will begin at 2:30 o'clock and at 8 o'clock daily. Her lectures will not be repetitions but will deal each time with some new problems of cooking, or with some new aspects of nutrition study.

Because of the interest shown by the Parents' League, of the third division public schools, in cooking, by establishing a cooking school for mothers, members of that league will be invited by the management to attend the exposition in a body.

Secretary of the Navy Daniels has given out the temporary itinerary of the Atlantic fleet from the time it leaves Guantanamo April 3 until its rendezvous at Hampton Roads June 21 to 25 preparatory to the cruise through the canal to the exposition at San Francisco.

DENIES APOLOGIZING TO MRS. HUTCHINS

Walter S. Hutchins, son of Stilson Hutchins, whose will, distributing a $4,000,000 estate, is being contested before Justice Anderson, in Criminal Court No. 2, testified today that he was never forced to apologize to Mrs. Rose Keeling Hutchins, third wife of his father, for alleged insulting language used to her.

Mr. Hutchins declared positively that he never used "insulting language" to his stepmother and that his father never asked him to make any apology. Referring to the personal encounter which he had with Robert Keeling, brother of Mrs. Rose K. Hutchins, at Atlantic City, the witness said that his father told him that he had expected "something like that, as he had heard them talking in Paris."

He said that his father explained that by "them" he meant Robert Keeling and his brother, the Rev. Stuart Keeling. He added that his father did not censure him because of the incident.
